Report of Board of Health.

TO THE SELECTMEN OF EPPING :

The general health of the people has been good.

Of typhoid fever there have been fewer cases than usual. Measles took a vacation during the summer, to reappear this winter. There was in the spring of '99 an epidemic of German measles, of a type more severe than usual. Beyond a little fright, no harm resulted. There have also occurred a few cases of scarlet fever ; no fatalities. The school in one district was closed per order of the board.

We desire to express our pleasure with the plumbing of the kitchen, lobby and both toilet rooms in the Town Hall. The sanitary condition of that otherwise splendid building was a fatal blot, and a disgrace to any community in this civilized and clean twentieth century.

Respectfully submitted,

A. W. MITCHELL, M. D.,	} Board of Health.

The school year with its care, work and anxiety has closed. And we find ourselves facing the old problems that need to be restated from year to year. If we were roused to the importance of the situation as it relates to the children in our homes, I am confident that these oft repeated lessons would be needless. Why, from this point should we not start with a new zeal and purpose to accomplish something practical as it relates to the school work in this town?

When we come to weigh the questions touching our homes we shall see that vigorous effort is needed to secure the best results. The efforts of the few result in great good, but the co-operation of the many all along the line would secure desirable changes. We have not the time to make an extended report touching those things that relate to the life of our school.

But we will point out some facts that need our thought and attention, and as we see these things why not help ourselves and assist the teachers in their noble work.

THE CARE OF THE CHILD.

If we understand the importance of child life we give our time and attention to the best methods in order to have the child face in the right direction, and this as a vital force in the home should be highly appreciated. But the time quickly comes when the boys and girls are found in the school-room in a new world, with new lessons from the teacher and new lessons from their companions. Now it is very often the case that the parent turns the child over to the care of the teacher and seems to think that the care at home can be relaxed because the child is in school. Now the teachers as a rule will be glad to look after the mental and moral training of their scholars, but while they are careful and diligent in looking after the welfare of their pupils, we shall find outside of the school-room many things will be said by the children, many lessons taught that should be corrected at home.

Hence we see that it will require some care on our part to instruct the child and keep the heart pure.

THE SMALL SCHOOLS.

I purpose at this point to introduce an illustration from a well known educator, "There were in the town of S—— five schools, in all of which there were only thirty-six pupils. In one other school in the same town there was the same number. Now the one school was not too large to be profitable, indeed, it could be managed to much better advantage by a single teacher than the school of seven pupils. This large school was in session twenty-nine weeks during the year under review, at an expense of $260. The five small schools, running the same number of weeks with less satisfactory results, cost $2,430."

This gives the practical solution in figures which "do not lie."

In the large school the whole expense of twenty-nine weeks schooling was $7.22 for each pupil; in the small schools for the same time, the actual expense as estimated in the town report was $67.50 per scholar.

In this illustration I think we may see a suggestion as it relates to the small schools in this town.

EAGERNESS TO ADVANCE.

There is a strong impelling purpose on the part of some pupils, and they are urged on by the parent to make extravagant advancement, so far as pages in our text books are concerned. You say it is a good thing to be ambitious in our school work. This is to be commended heartily if the work is well done. But we shall find that quantity not quality is the important thing with many. We are glad when we see this eagerness to advance, while we know that the first lessons have been mastered, and thus the child is laying a good foundation for an education. It is a great mistake to press the pupil into work that he does not understand and cannot comprehend, when the first lessons have been neglected. Step by step, earnestly and faithfully taken in our studies, will lead us on to desirable results, so that our work shall be a pleasure to our teachers and a source of profit to ourselves.

THE WORK.

We shall find that close application, and careful work, will bring its reward. It is stated on authority that "the ordinary German boy of fourteen or fifteen has accomplished a great deal more intellectual work than the American boy. He probably knows at least as much about Latin as our boys at seventeen or eighteen. He has had some Greek and French. He has learned a great deal about the myths, legends, history, and prominent personages of his own country, together with its special geography; he has studied Geometry and Algebra, he has learned by heart more masterpieces of his native literature than our boy ever learns. In general attainments and mental culture, it is claimed, the German boy is some two years ahead of our boys.

"What is done by German boys, or French boys, or boys in some schools in our own country, may be done by our boys in general under an equally favoring system, for it will not do for an American boy to confess inferiority in brightness to his German or French neighbor. We are speaking, of course, of boys in those foreign schools, and not of some pupils of French or German extraction in our schools. But the truth is, that the American boy is not willing to work as hard as they—at least, over his books." A school committee of long experience recently said, "Parents are mightily afraid that their children shall overwork, and they take the children's word for it too."

Professor Wells, of Bowdoin, says, it is this willingness to be trained in school, and use of the best methods, that makes out of the German boys the greatest scholars the world has ever known, and the most successful traders of the commercial world."

THE ATTENDANCE.

If you please, just glance at that young man in the shop; his school days are over, he has commenced the active duties of life. What would you say if that man was out of the shop one day next week, and should lose two days the next, and when it came to the close of the month, had really lost six days, that meant to him nine dollars out of his wages for one month? Why, you would say, we must labor with that young man at once. For this means the hard cold cash, and he cannot afford thus to sacrifice his time to meet these trifling demands. Why should the child be allowed to neglect this mental equipment that will be the source of future loss and lasting regret?

But, says one, we see the dollar, while the mental movements are hidden, and do not appeal to us so strongly. Let us consider that the well being and the healthy growth of the child, not only in physical, but in intellectual and moral results, depend upon these seemingly little things being constantly, carefully and conscientiously attended to, so that the child may reach, not only a reasonable advancement, but the highest attainment.

THE TEACHERS.

These thoughts are from an address that I saw a short time ago, and I give them a place in this report.

“Emerson says, ‘God offers to every man his choice between truth and repose. Take which you please, you can never have both.’ Goethe startles us with the proposition, ‘There is nothing more frightful than a teacher who knows only what his scholars are intended to know.’ God keeps you studying that he may keep you prepared for teaching. This is the method of keeping the teachers’ work rich and juicy, so that each lesson is fresh fruit picked from a living vine, and not canned goods, put up in former years and warranted not to change in any climate, not dried fruits, shrivelled and juiceless, showing certain marks of antiquity. The lesson, like manna, must be gathered fresh every day, else it becomes wormy. Embalmed beef produces flabby soldiers. Dr. Thomas Arnold, a prince among teachers, never taught a lesson upon the subjects most familiar to him without special preparation for that one class recitation. The knowing teacher, is the growing teacher, and so long as a teacher grows, he will never pass the dead line.”
